This is a cute way to package some knitted gloves for a quick & fun gift! Grab some mason jars, bands, papers and embellishments and get to work!

Pop your gloves into the jar and cut a circle of patterned paper – use a large circle die or if you don't have any of those, find a bowl or similar item in the kitchen that you can draw around and cut out.

Place that circle of paper on top of your jar and push the band on top – gently push down to get a slight imprint of that circle on the paper and then take that and the band off – lay the band upside down on your work surface and line up your paper (also upside down) on top of it – then really push the paper into the band so that it conforms to the edges. When happy with the fit, pop back onto the jar and screw the band in place – and now for the fun bit – decorating!

Below you will see how I decorated mine – all supplies I used for all of them are detailed in the Supply List above.

You can find my blog post detailing these boxes at www.SarahsInkSpot.com in the November 15th 2017 post.

First up is my rustic one...

I used a piece of paper from Merry Little Christmas for the lid and Jute Twine is tied around the band.

The tag is cut from Crumb Cake cardstock using a die from Santa's Suit and its hangs by a piece of Linen Thread

The sentiment was stamped and cut out using the 1" Circle Punch

The boughs were cut from Old Olive using a die from Christmas Staircase Thinlits

Santa's outfit was paper-pieced using gingham paper from Quilted Christmas and his skin was colored using a Pink Pirouette Stampin' Blends Marker and Old Olive for the gloves

Next up is my traditional one...

The snowflake was cut from the same sparkly paper using a die from Seasonal Layers Thinlits
